Spend Day at Frederick and Inspect System of Preparing Milk.

Many Washington physicians and their families think today they know all about how to run a dairy, after the trip they made yesterday to Frederick, Md., where they inspected the plant of the Baltimore and Washington White Cross Milk Company.

The company officials acted as hosts on the outing. With everything in its plant open to inspection, the president and directors of the company sent invitations to 60 Washington physicians and their families to spend the day yesterday and inspect the methods employed in preparing milk for their customers.

E. L. Cockrell, the company's president, met the party at the Union Station and conducted them, by a special train on the Baltimore and Ohio, to the establishment at Frederick.

Personally Conducted Tour.

Mr. Cockrell and David Lowenstein, one of the directors, personally conducted a tour of the entire plant and thoroughly explained and demonstrated the workings of the system from the time the milk is received from the farmer until it is packed in refrigerators to be shipped to the city.

The White Cross Company believes it has solved the problem of pure milk. The system employed is, first, having the cans in which the milk is brought in from the surrounding farms, thoroughly cleaned and sterilized at the plant by the use of live steam before they are returned to the farmer. The fresh milk is placed in a vat and warmed to 140 degrees Fahrenheit, a blast of filtered air is then driven through it at a great velocity for about three hours. Thus the impurities are removed, the bacteria destroyed, and the greater part of the water carried off by evaporation. When the milk is reduced to one-fourth its original volume it is bottled in specially constructed machinery in sterilized bottles, and is then ready for delivery.

Sold in Concentrated Form.

In this concentrated form it may be kept for several days without danger of souring, for ordinary use one has only to add the necessary amount of sterilized water, and a milk much purer than when first taken from the cow is the result.

After the doctors had passed judgment on the methods employed by the White Cross people in their fight against bacteria and commended the officers on the condition of the plant, a luncheon was taken to the New City Hotel, where luncheon was served. Here White Cross milk was served in four ways, as ordinary sweet milk, as butter milk, as ice cream, and by no means least, as milk punch.
